

Bowed in remembrance

Led in prayer by Father Martin Clancy of St. Paul's Catholic Church in Manchester, Gov. Thomas P. Salmon joins with family, friends and law enforcement associates of the late Manchester police Chief Dana L. Thompson on Monday, in ceremonies honoring Chief Thompson, who was killed, and village Chief George Hoag, who was wounded, in a gun battle here last Dec. 12. Salmon said Chief Thompson, "in keeping with the highest duty of any law enforcement office, gave his life so society and our state can be safe for our families, children and their children after them." Commemorative plaques for bravery were presented to Mrs. Thompson and to Chief Hoag during the awards banquet in Manchester. In photo from left: Joseph Shea of Natick, Mass., executive director of the New England Police Chief's Association; Mrs. Hilda Thompson; Gov. Salmon; Father Clancy; Manchester Village police Commissioner Richard B. Rockwell; and Chief Hoag.